The Can-Can is the topic of the The Can-Can is the topic of the day, and it was certainly a suggestive sort of a show. While His Honor, the Mayor, and his vigilant police force have their bristles up and pointed with a fine moral sense, I desire to suggest that in order to keep themselves up to the proper tone for the protection of the public morals, they should manifest something of the same zeal in the suppression of Can-Can-ism in the city, and not bottle up their righteous indignation in order to empty all their vials on some traveling troupe whose presque among us is morely the ce among us is merely th

I use the term Can-Can because now it is the synonym for flagrant viola-tions of the city ordinances. His Honor, the Mayor, with a sprinkling of his po-lice, attended the Can-Can on Friday the Mayor, with a sprinkling of his po-lice, attended the Can-Can on Friday evening, and stayed, if I miatake not, un-til the end of the performance. Not, I suppose, because he unjoyed it, but simply like the boy that insisted on going to the circus, that he might see the folly of it. Whether it took him until the limid drop-ping of the curtain to comprehend the char-acter of it, or whether he thought it best to allow the company to fill up the cup of ping of the curtain to comprehend the character of it, or whether he thought it best to allow the company to fill up the cup of their iniquity in order that the vindication of merality, under the forms of the municipal court, might be more ostentations, impressive and complete, and the city's exchequer benefitted thereby. I do not presume to guess. The Mayor was at the second exhibition on Saturday evening just in time for the Can-Can, backed by a police force. Well; this was all right, and showed a commendable zeal for the preservation of public morals and the enforcement of penalties for infractions of the City ordinances. I have said this was well, and now I would ask his Honor, the Mayor, if he does not think it would be a good deal better for the morality of this city if a little more vigilance was manifested in the suppression of the gambling hells and dens of prostitution which sit as it were on the very edge of our most public thoroughfares. If may be said that the police force of this city do not know where the most notorious of these places are, they are of all men the most stupid, and the least worthy to fill the position of an efficient police. If they do not know of them, what are their eyes for, what do their wanderings to and fro like birds of vil omen amount to?

The Can-Can was immoral and was suppressed to a rather was reduced to an ex-

omen amount to 7

The Can-Can was immoral and was suppressed, or rather was reduced to an exceedingly mild affair by the spasm of virtuous vigilance on the part of the police. The Can-Can is gone, but the institution on Twelfth street remains, and promises to be daily and nightly with us. How long did that fare den near the corner of Fourteenth and Market continue after it was known or might have been known to the police? I might speak of several other well known disreputable places that are well known disreputable places that are well known to the police. If they claim that they are not known to them, they ought to be discharged from the service. How much attention is paid to keeping the most public corners on Marservice. How much attention is paid to keeping the most public corners on Mar-ket and Twelfth and Market and Four-teenth streets clear of a lot of despicable loafers who hang around these corners and insult passing ladies by vulgar and profane expressions, or impudently star-ing them in the face scarcely deign to move off the sidowalks to allow them passing room? I might go on and enunmove off the sidewalks to allow them in passing room? I might go on and enumerate many violations of the ordinances of this city which are of every day occurrence—such yiolations as are a constant source of annoyance to good citizens and are as plain to the police, or ought to be, as the noses on their faces. I do not speak of these things for the purpose of malicious fault finding with the Mayor or malicious fault finding with the Mayor or last police officers, but I do intend to call attention to the remissions of the authorities in the suppression of demorralizing influences which are doing more injury to the young men, and old men too, for that matter, than all the exhibitions of a Can-Can character that have ever taken place in the city.
